(Nov. 15, 2024) | Toronto, Ont.: On Nov. 25, 2024, at 9 a.m. EST, the luxury performance clothing brand Canada Goose is set to launch SMART GOOSE, a first-of-its-kind, tech-enhanced outerwear line that promotes health, wellness and circular fashion. Toronto native and hip-hop icon Drake will unveil the new product line alongside CEO Dani Reiss at 60053 Bowie Ave.—the original Toronto warehouse where the iconic brand was founded. The product line includes sensors, automated zippers and app integration to enable features like temperature regulation, UV protection and product longevity.

Following the launch, stakeholders can view a live demonstration of the clothing line’s features and the accompanying Canada Goose app. The brand will also welcome the public to try on and purchase limited edition SMART GOOSE pieces.

“There has simply never been anything done like this before,” Canada Goose CEO Dani Reiss makes clear. “We are so proud to have created something that uses technology to simultaneously help people and restore the Earth while paying homage to the city where we started it all.”

The luxury brand uses a unique artificial intelligence model and machine learning technology to power and fully integrate SMART GOOSE. All SMART GOOSE apparel contains over 50 sensors, enabling the clothing line’s features and personalizing the user experience.
